

of their hopes and bent to the st, they burst through the ope nd. By and by their pulses sle "Huckleberry, what d THE two boys flew on ard over their shoulders from ti d. Every stump that started up ir as they sped by some of THE two boys flew on and on, toward the village, speechless with horror. They glanced backward over their shoulders from time to time, apprehensively, as if they feared they might be followed.

Every stump that started up in their path seemed a man and an enemy, and made them catch their breath; and as they sped by some outlying cottages that lay near the village, the barking of the

"If we can only get to the old tannery before we break down!" whispered Tom, in short catches aroused watch-dogs seemed to give wings to their feet.

between breaths. "I can't stand it much longer

Huckleberry's hard p seemed to give wings to

"If we can only get to between breaths. "I can

Huckleberry's hard par hopes and bent to their

by their pulses slowed down, and Tom whispered: "Huckleberry, what do you reckon'll come of this?"

between breaths. "I can't stand it much longer."

"Huckleberry, what do you reckon'll come of this?"

barking of the aroused watch-dogs seemed to give wings to their feet.

shadows beyond. By and by their pulses slowed down, and Tom whispered:

eath; and tch-dogs catches of their ast, they burst through the open woor and ren gracerul and exhausted in the sheltering shadows beyond. By and

THE two boys flew on and on, toward the village, speechless with horror. They glanced backward over their shoulders from time to time, apprehensively, as if they feared they might be followed. Every stump that started up in their path seemed a man and an enemy, and made them catch their breath; and as they sped by some outlying cottages that lay near the village, the "If we can only get to the old tannery before we break down!" whispered Tom, in short catches Huckleberry's hard pantings were his only reply, and the boys fixed their eyes on the goal of their hopes and bent to their work to win it. They gained steadily on it, and at last, breast to breast, they burst through the open door and fell grateful and exhausted in the sheltering "Huckleberry, what do you reckon'll come of this?" THE two boys flew on and on, toward the village, speechless with horror. They glanced backward over their shoulders from time to time, apprehensively, as if they feared they might be followed. Every stump that started up in their path seemed a man and an enemy, and made them catch their breath; and as they sped by some outlying cottages that lay near the village, the barking of the aroused watch-dogs seemed to give wings to their feet. "If we can only get to the old tannery before we break down!" whispered Tom, in short catches between breaths. "I can't stand it much longer." Huckleberry's hard pantings were his only reply, and the boys fixed their eyes on the goal of their hopes and bent to their work to win it. They gained steadily on it, and at last, breast to breast, they burst through the open door and fell grateful and exhausted in the sheltering shadows beyond. By and by their pulses slowed down, and Tom whispered: "Huckleberry, what do you reckon'll come of this?"

THE two boys flew on and on, toward the village, speechless with horror. They glanced backward over their shoulders from time to time, apprehensively, as if they feared they might be followed.

Every stump that started up in their path seemed a man and an enemy, and made them catch their breath; and as they sped by some outlying cottages that lay near the village, the barking of the

"If we can only get to the old tannery before we break down!" whispered Tom, in short catches

Huckleberry's hard pantings were his only reply, and the boys fixed their eyes on the goal of their hopes and bent to their work to win it. They gained steadily on it, and at last, breast to breast, they burst through the open door and fell grateful and exhausted in the sheltering shadows beyond. By

THE two boys flew on and on, toward the village, speechless with horror. They glanced backward over their shoulders from time to time, apprehensively, as if they feared they might be followed. Every stump that started up in their path seemed a man and an enemy, and made them catch their breath; and as they sped by some outlying cottages that lay near the village, the barking of the aroused watch-dogs

"If we can only get to the old tannery before we break down!" whispered Tom, in short catches

Huckleberry's hard pantings were his only reply, and the boys fixed their eyes on the goal of their hopes and bent to their work to win it. They gained steadily on it, and at last, breast to breast, they burst through the open door and fell grateful and exhausted in the sheltering shadows beyond. By and aroused watch-dogs seemed to give wings to their feet.

and by their pulses slowed down, and Tom whispered:

"Huckleberry, what do you reckon'll come of this?"

seemed to give wings to their feet.

between breaths. "I can't stand it much longer."

by their pulses slowed down, and Tom whispered:

between breaths. "I can't stand it much longer."